THE TRIBUNE.

The Rate of Interest on Money.

It is well known that, for some time past, some of our best managed Banks as well as many of our first commercial firms have discounted "short paper" at the rate of four and a half, and, in some instances, as low as four per cent. per annum. A close observation of the course of business for several years has led to the conviction in my own mind, that the rate of interest on money will rule considerably lower in this country, for the extremely small profits at present afforded by every kind of business in this country; the fair presumption that no extraordinary demand, such who are at all conversant with the subject, but purchase of our crops and for the importation and sale of manufactured goods. Heretofore, owing in part to the general embarrassment of our merchants, but chiefly to the degradation of the pubhe credit, our foreign friends have shown no disthan was absolutely necessary. Now, however, weather. a different state of things is arising. Suffice it to say that large sums have recently been sent from account. When confidence in us once becomes the very nature of our relations, must be to a

In view of what has been said, the fallacy of refusing to make loans for long periods, at a lower rate of interest than seven per cent., is manifest. Such a course of action can only proceed from the supposition that the existing state of may be done at present. AMERICANUS.

and continental money markets.

More Fruits of Protection .- We have already noticed the circumstance that by protecting the Cotton-growing interest of the South, that business has been carried to the full limit of a remunerating profit, and that the same wise policy applied to the manufacture of that American staple has enabled us not only to supply ourselves but to export largely of Cotton goods, and even to old England herself.

What has been done in this country by judiclously fostering the cultivation of Cotton and its manufacture, can be fully equaled by directing American skill, industry and indefatigable perseverance to the growing of cocoons and the manufacture of Silk. The immense immigration to this country from all parts of Europe will soon obviate all objection on account of a scarcity of cheap labor.

The duty now laid on French Silks is operating most auspiciously by furnishing a strong inducement to those engaged in making Silk in France for this market to move to the United States. where provisions to feed operatives are so much | General Austin : cheaper, and where land to grow mulberry trees costs comparatively nothing.

We learn from a late number of the Baton Rouge (La.) Gazette, that a gentleman named Vasseur, just arrived from France, has purchased land, and is making rapid arrangements to commence the Silk business, in which he has had the experience of many years. Suppose Mr. Vasseur should be successful-of which there seems to be no doubt in Baton Rouge-and employ 1000 persons, what farmer does not see that these 1000 laborers would consume ten times the amount of American bread-stuffs, and at ten times the profit to the cultivators of the soil, that would accrue if they were located in the interior of France and could not taste a particle of American flour without paying a duty of 100 per cent. on its value at New.Orleans? Buffalo Com. Adv.

FALSEHOOD AND DISTRUST .- It is scarcely possible to imagine a more melancholy situation than that of a weak and helpless woman separated by falsehood from all true fellowship, either human or divine; for there is no fellowship in falsehood. The very soul of disunion might justly be said to be embodied in a lie. It is in fact the sudden breaking asunder of that great chain which binds together all spiritual influences: and she who is guilty of falsehood must necessarily be alone .-Alone, for she has no sympathy of feeling with the beautiful creation around her, of which it has truly been said that "nature never deceives." Alone, for in that higher world, where all her secret thoughts and acts are registered, its very light is truth. Alone, for she has voluntarily become a stranger, a suspected thing, an enemy to that one friend in whose bosom she might have found shelter and repose. It is a fact which scarcely needs to be repeated. that the closer the intimacy, and the more important the trust, the greater is the individual infeeling when that trust is abused. Thus when the child is first made to understand that it has been deceived by its mother, the very life of its little soul seems for a moment to be quenched. When the father finds that his prodigal son has but returned to take advantage of affection and credulity, his wounded spirit sinks, and his recommendation. Mry and consequently the violation of personal credulity, his wounded spirit sinks, and his weary heart is broken. But when the husband looks with earnest eyes into the countenance whose beauty was once his sunshine; when memory thes back and brings again her plighted vow, with all its treasury of truth; when he thinks of that fond heart which seemed to cling to him in all the guileless innocence of unsophisticated youth oh! it is horrible "to be discarded thence," by the dark venom of distrust, perpetually reminding him that the bright and sunny tide of early love, upon which he trusted all the riches of his soul, is but a smiling and deceitful ocean, whose glassy surface at once reflects the hues of heaven and

The blade of great extent regulated by the rate in the British it consists merely of a single piece of brass wire agged with a sharp instrument. The pattern to be carved is placed on the wood, and a hole is bored in it, through which the wire is passed and made fast to the handle, which is kept outside the wood; the drawing is then cut out with the greatest care and accuracy. THE HORRORS OF WAR .- The following passage occurs in the leading article of the last number of the Law Reporter, on the Case of the Somers. It is said to be the production of Attorney

"It is against all our notions of justice, and all our religious sentiments, that a man should hold, by his own breath, despotic power over human life; but war, in all its branches, in all its conditions, in all its forms, is equally adverse to moral feeling and religious duty. What is a line-ofbattle ship but one vast volcano for human destruction-an artificial earthquake, ready to burst upon mankind? What are your navy yards, your arsenals, your forts, your magazines of arms, but instruments which the passions and crimes of men have invented for desolation and death It is incident to this tremendous battery, that a power should direct it proportioned in its might to the great machinery it moves. Hence come martial law and the law of war-softened, indeed, in the civilization of the world, and impressed to some extent with the improvements of the agestern, severe, sudden in its decision, prompt in its exercise, yet a necessary part of that great system of wrong, which the violence of human passions has contrived for the propagation of human wretchedness, and which will continue to pour forth its vials of wrath, till the predicted time arrives, "when men shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."
